I learn the following interesting facts respecting the expedition which left German town on the 11th under Major D. E. Coon: specting the expedition which left Germantows on the 11th under Major D. E. Coon:

Starting in the direction of Olive Branch, Miss., the Coldwater was crossed seven miles from Bytasia. A battellon was sent thence to Tollahoma. The main body had several aktralishes with the enemy, passing within three miles of Waterford. Thypah River was crossed on a postoon bridge. The enemy then retired to Myatt's Crossing to intercept the expedition, but were handaomely deceived by the broops romaining in eamy all day, and then marching for Pontote. The expedition was commanded by the celebrated raider Gen. B. H. Grierson, and composed a tolerably large savalry, force. The weather was pleasant and the roads good. Before reaching Oxford, on the Mississippi Contral Railroad, a squadron that had been sent from the main body to reconnoiset, returned with two men wounded, in a skirmish with a party of rebels. They had a Captain of a company prisoner. The examp had left Oxford, recently Forrest's headquarters, for the South, ten days before. We found that the rebels had nearly all left Gen, Grant's from to reinforce the troops lying at Meridian.

Mississippi troops are deserting rapidly and Since that time the heats and and wife have resided at No Division street.

When Richeler became cognizant of this fact, he was at first highly indigeant, and subsequently very gloomy and dispirited. Last Wednesday morning he risited the files and had an interview with Mr. and Mrs. Mach. He told the latter finat he did not care to live any longer now that she was the wife of another. Late the following evoling Elcheler returned to Maen's residence, and said that he was going to enlist in the smay the next day, and had come to bid them both good-bye. He sook out his pocket bookland offered some money to Mr. Men, at the same time arging the latter to go out and get two bottles of wine, with which to take sparting drink. Maen declined to go for the whedam Elcheler thereupon went for it himself. Subsequent events showed that Elcheler's motive was to get Men out of the room, and during his absence to murder the wife. This is the only conclusion to which one can come tudging from what immediately followed. Elcheler was absent but a short time, when he returned with two bottles of wine, and three tumblers. eract truth of all this we make eract truth of all this we make eract truth of all this we make the t From the commencement I have taken the ground that the pretended acknowledgment of max, of the Couperhead leaders and their press, that Slavery was dead, is but a ruse to Init Union men into a fameled sinte of ecurity, and sho to distract our party with not only new candidates, but new sesses. As parties and their avowed principles and polities now stand, the Copperheads ace that they have no chance of success. The doom of inevitable defeat awaits them. Their plan consequently is to raise new issues to distract and divide us, to encourage rival presidential candidates, and if possible get up such irreconcilable differences in our ranks, as to call out a third candidate. They can set their men to work upon 6cc. Fremont and his friends, in order to encourage them to press his claims to the extent of threatening to put thin in the field as an independent candidate. Indeed, I have heard the friends of another Presidential candidates ay that Gen. Fremont will certsinly run if Mr. Lincoln is nominated, but that he will not if Mr. — is nominated. But the Copperhead anti-slavery dodge is the latest phase in politice. One or two of the leaders get up in their planes and say that slavery is dead. See predictable a graceful culogy over the corpse. A few green Union men swallow the bait; think that the Copperheads are beginning to come around; that party lines are prestly much obliterated, and that the Union nen can elect prestly much whoever they piesse. Their candidates spring up like mishrooms. This, it will be remembered, was late on Wednesday night last. The next we learn about Elehler is that he was found dead on Friday in his room at Clark's Hotel, No. 94 Chatham street. Officer Edward P. Whitcomb, of the Seventh Precinct, was notified, and from the investigations which he has made it appears that immediately after Elehler is though the work of the head and took a room. On Thursday, when the chembermaid went to his room, he found the door locked; after rapping and receiving no answer, she passed on. Not thinking it a very strange circumstance to find the odd-room door fastened, she made to report of the fact, the proprietor caused the door to be forced, and Elehler was found dead in the same condition. Upon making a report of the fact, the proprietor caused the door to be forced, and Elehler was found that death was the result of areas found dead in the bed.
